

After several years of looking in different parts of Spain we came across Flordevida by chance on the internet. We had not planned on living in a mobile home but were curious to see what it was like. As soon as we arrived on the site we realised this was where we wanted to live. It felt like home. The scenery is stunning and we could tell that when the site was finished it would be lovely. The homes have everything you need and have lots of outside space, as you spend most of your time outside. We sold our home and were living here a few months later. It's everything we expected it to be and I felt at home and settled the day we arrived. People were very friendly and Terry and Johnathan are always on hand and very helpful if there are any problems. Whenever we have visitors they love it and don't want to go home. An old friend of ours, a widow in his late seventies came out on holiday, sold his home in England and arrives here next week. Aguilas is a lovely town with everything you need, lots of beaches, shops and bars. It has a beautiful square to sit having a coffee watching everyone go by. Although we only speak a few words of Spanish the people are friendly and helpful. We have made friends on the site and in town and are planning on spending the rest of our lives here.
